

Ephraim Batty Barn

This very old barn at 902 South Round Valley lane in Wallsburg, comes complete with peacocks, rabbits, chickens, cows, and goats. If you drive by there, you might see a peacock strutting in front of the barn and showing off his beautiful tail

Ephraim Batty built the barn well over 100 years ago of red pine, the standard materials used in those days. Originally there were 6 sheds and five are still there.. The accompanying home is 127 years old.

The barn was used to store hay and for milk cows and there are pens for where the animals sleep.

Subsequent owners were Carl Batty, and his son Cullen Batty. Nine years ago Jim Hamilton and his wife purchased the property and it is very much used and seems to be in good condition.

Informants: Reed Ford and Mrs Jim Hamilton

OLD BATTY BARN

This very old barn is 202 South Round Valley Ave. in Walbridge, comes complete with perches, rabbits, chickens, cows, and goats. It was built by there, you might see a person standing in front of the barn and showing off his beautiful tail.
Epitaph Batty built the barn well over 100 years ago or so and the standard materials used in those days. Originally there were 6 sheds and five are still there. The accompanying home is 17 years old.
The barn was used for horse hay and for milk barns and there are pens for where the animals sleep.
Subsequent owners were Carl Batty, son, and his son Gustin Batty. Nine years ago, the Hamilton and his wife purchased the property and it is very much used and seems to be in good condition.

OLD BATTY BARN

This very old barn at 902 South Round Valley lane in Wallsburg, comes complete with peacocks, rabbits, chickens, cows, and goats. You might see a peacock strutting in front of the barn and showing off his beautiful fan if you go there.

Ephraim Batty built the barn well over 100 years ago of red pine, the standard materials used in those days. Originally there were 6 sheds and five are still there.. The accompanying home is 127 years old.

The barn was used to store hay and for milk barns and there are pens for where the animals sleep.

Subsequent owners were Carl Batty, son, and his son Cullen Batty. Nine years ago Jim Hamilton and his wife purchased the property and it is very much used and seems to be in good condition.

Information - Reed Ford

OLD BATTY BARN

This very old barn at 903 South Grand Valley Lane in Washington comes complete with pens, pens, pens, pens, pens, pens, and goats. You might see a peacock standing in front of the barn and showing off his beautiful fan if you go there.
Batty built the barn well over 100 years ago of red pine, the standard material used in those days. Originally there were 6 sheds and five are still there. The accompanying house is 127 years old.
The barn was used to store hay and for milk barns and there are pens for where the animals sleep.
Subsequent owners were Carl Batty, son, and his son Ellen Batty. Nine years ago Jim Hamilton and his wife purchased the property and it is very much used and seems to be in good condition.